

A mare and her foal with barnyard friends.

When a foal is old enough to be away from its mother it is called a weanling.

A one-year-old is called a yearling. This yearling is getting a bath.

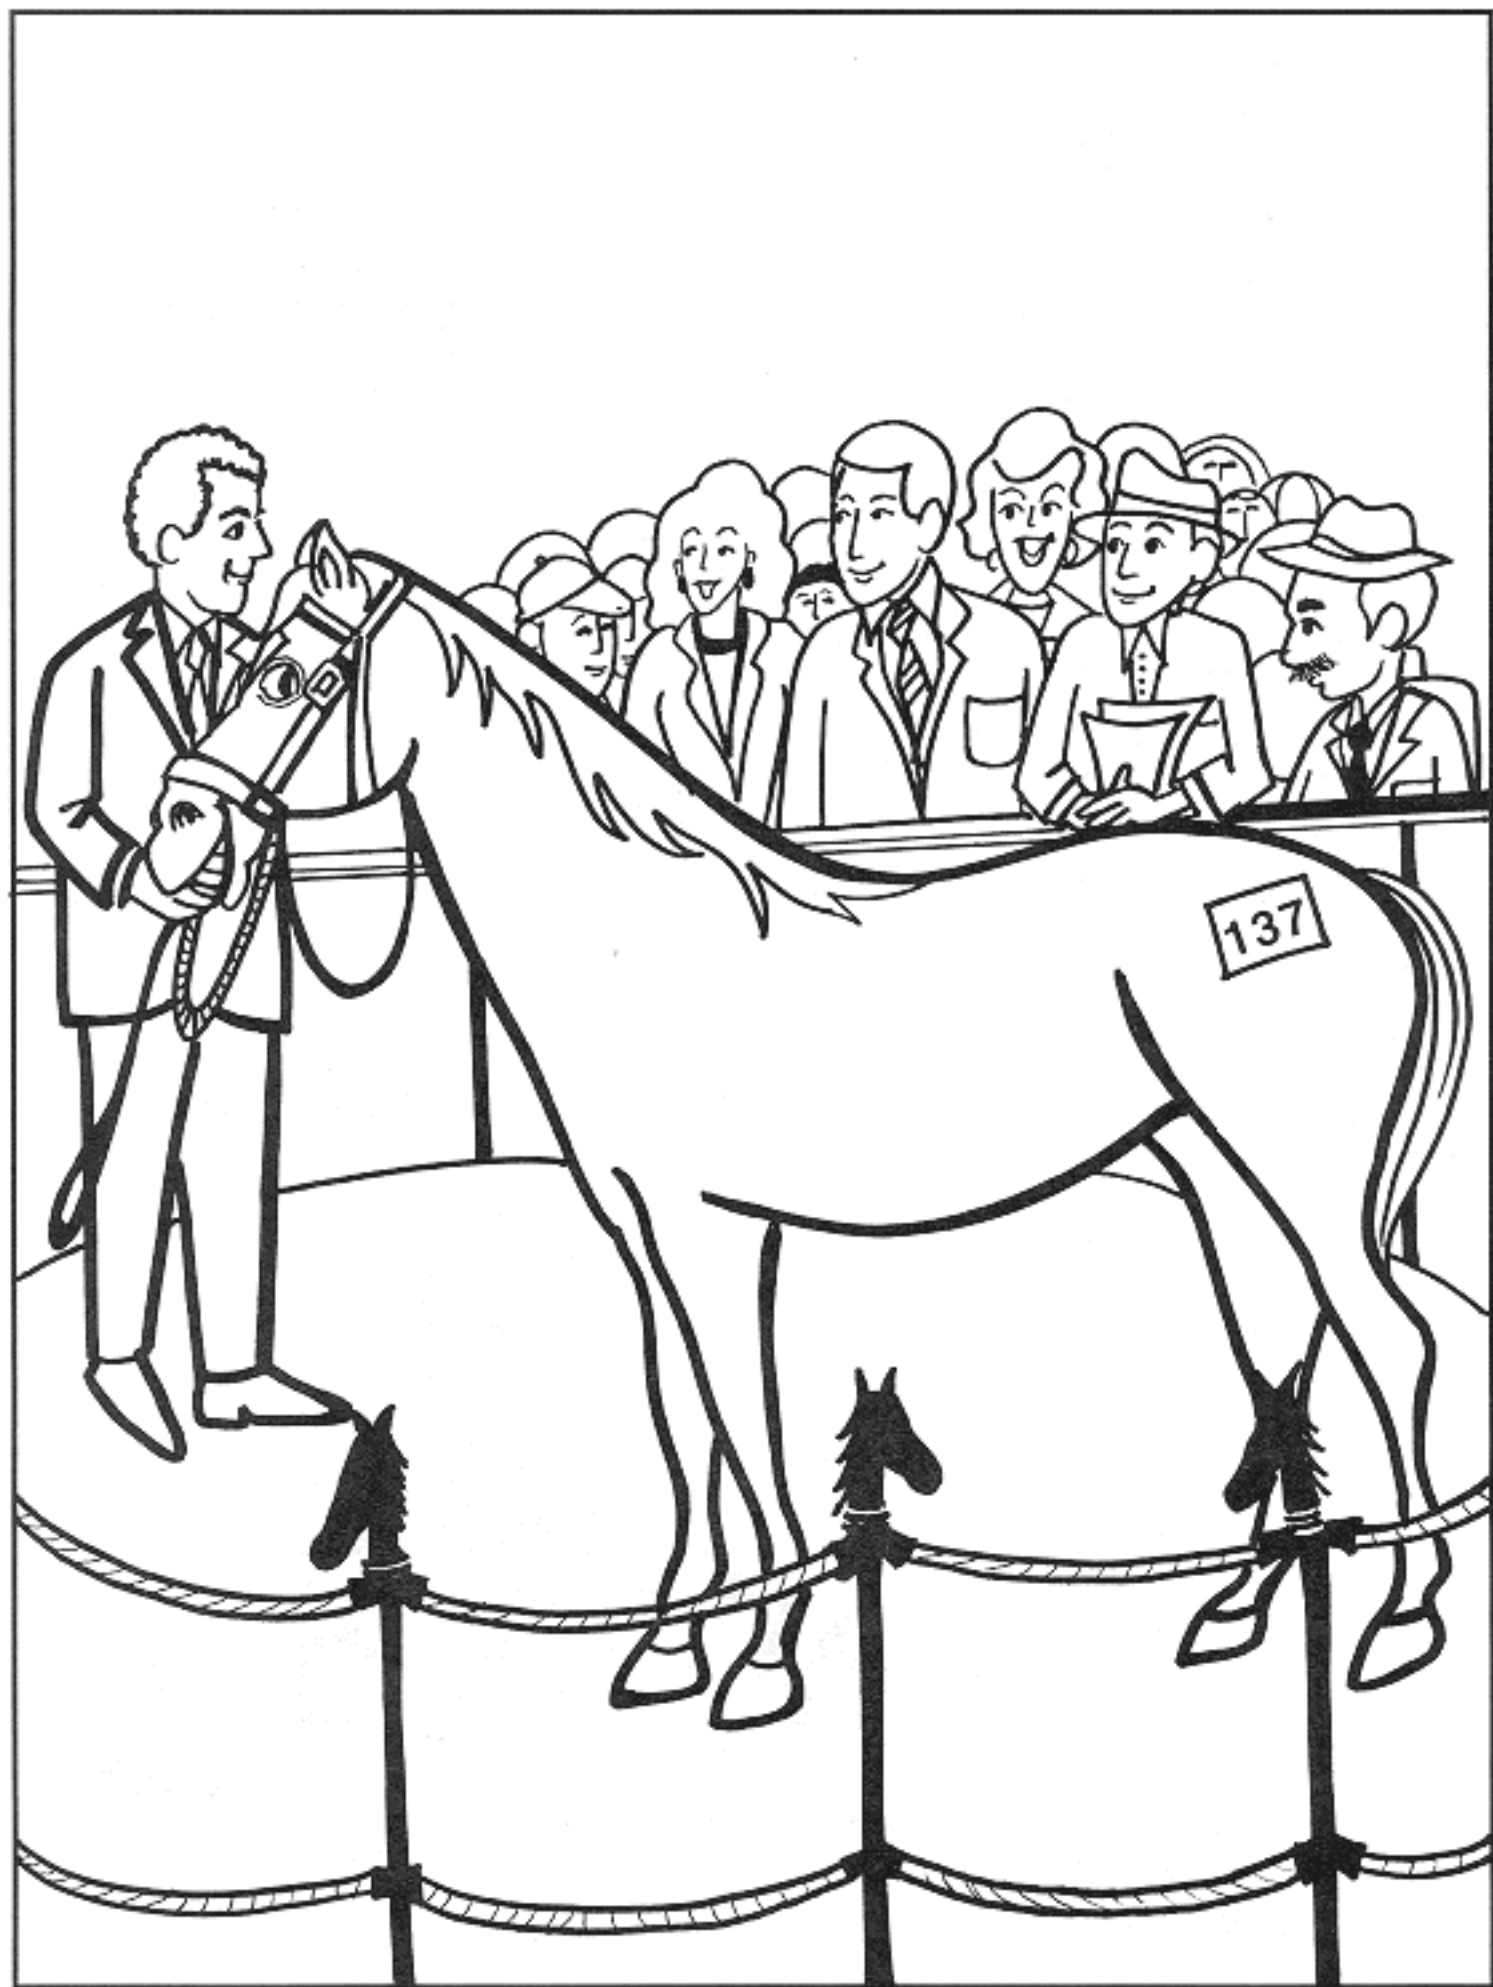

Sometimes yearlings are sold. This yearling is at a Keeneland yearling sale.

Interested buyers inspect the yearling.

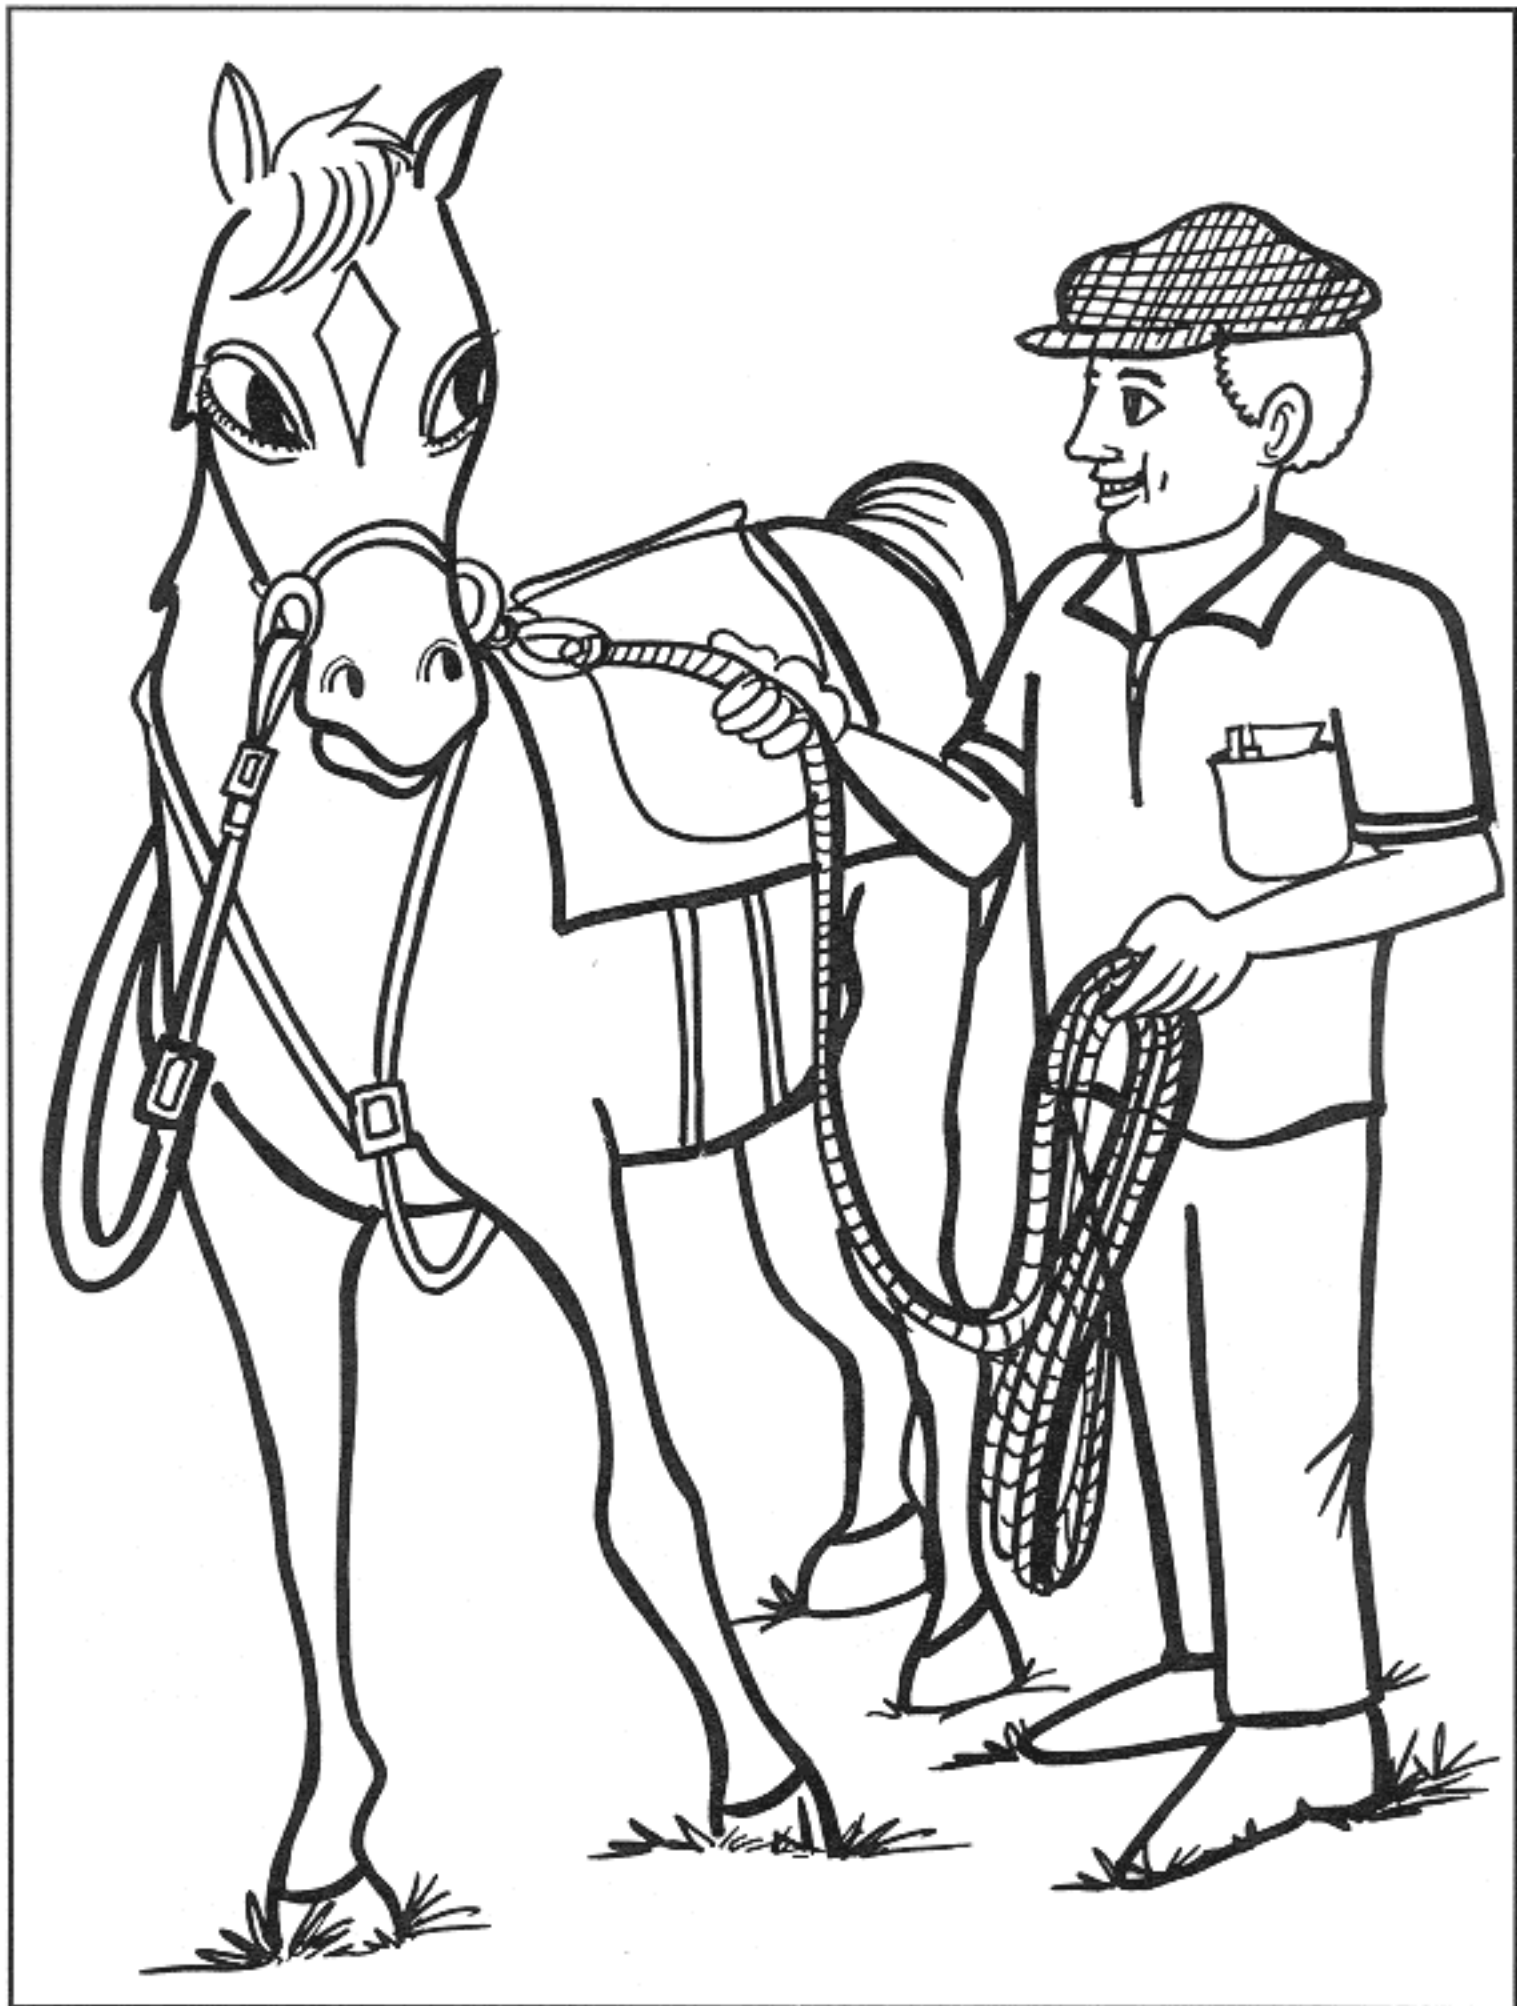

The auctioneers sell the yearling.

The yearling is being sold in the sales ring.

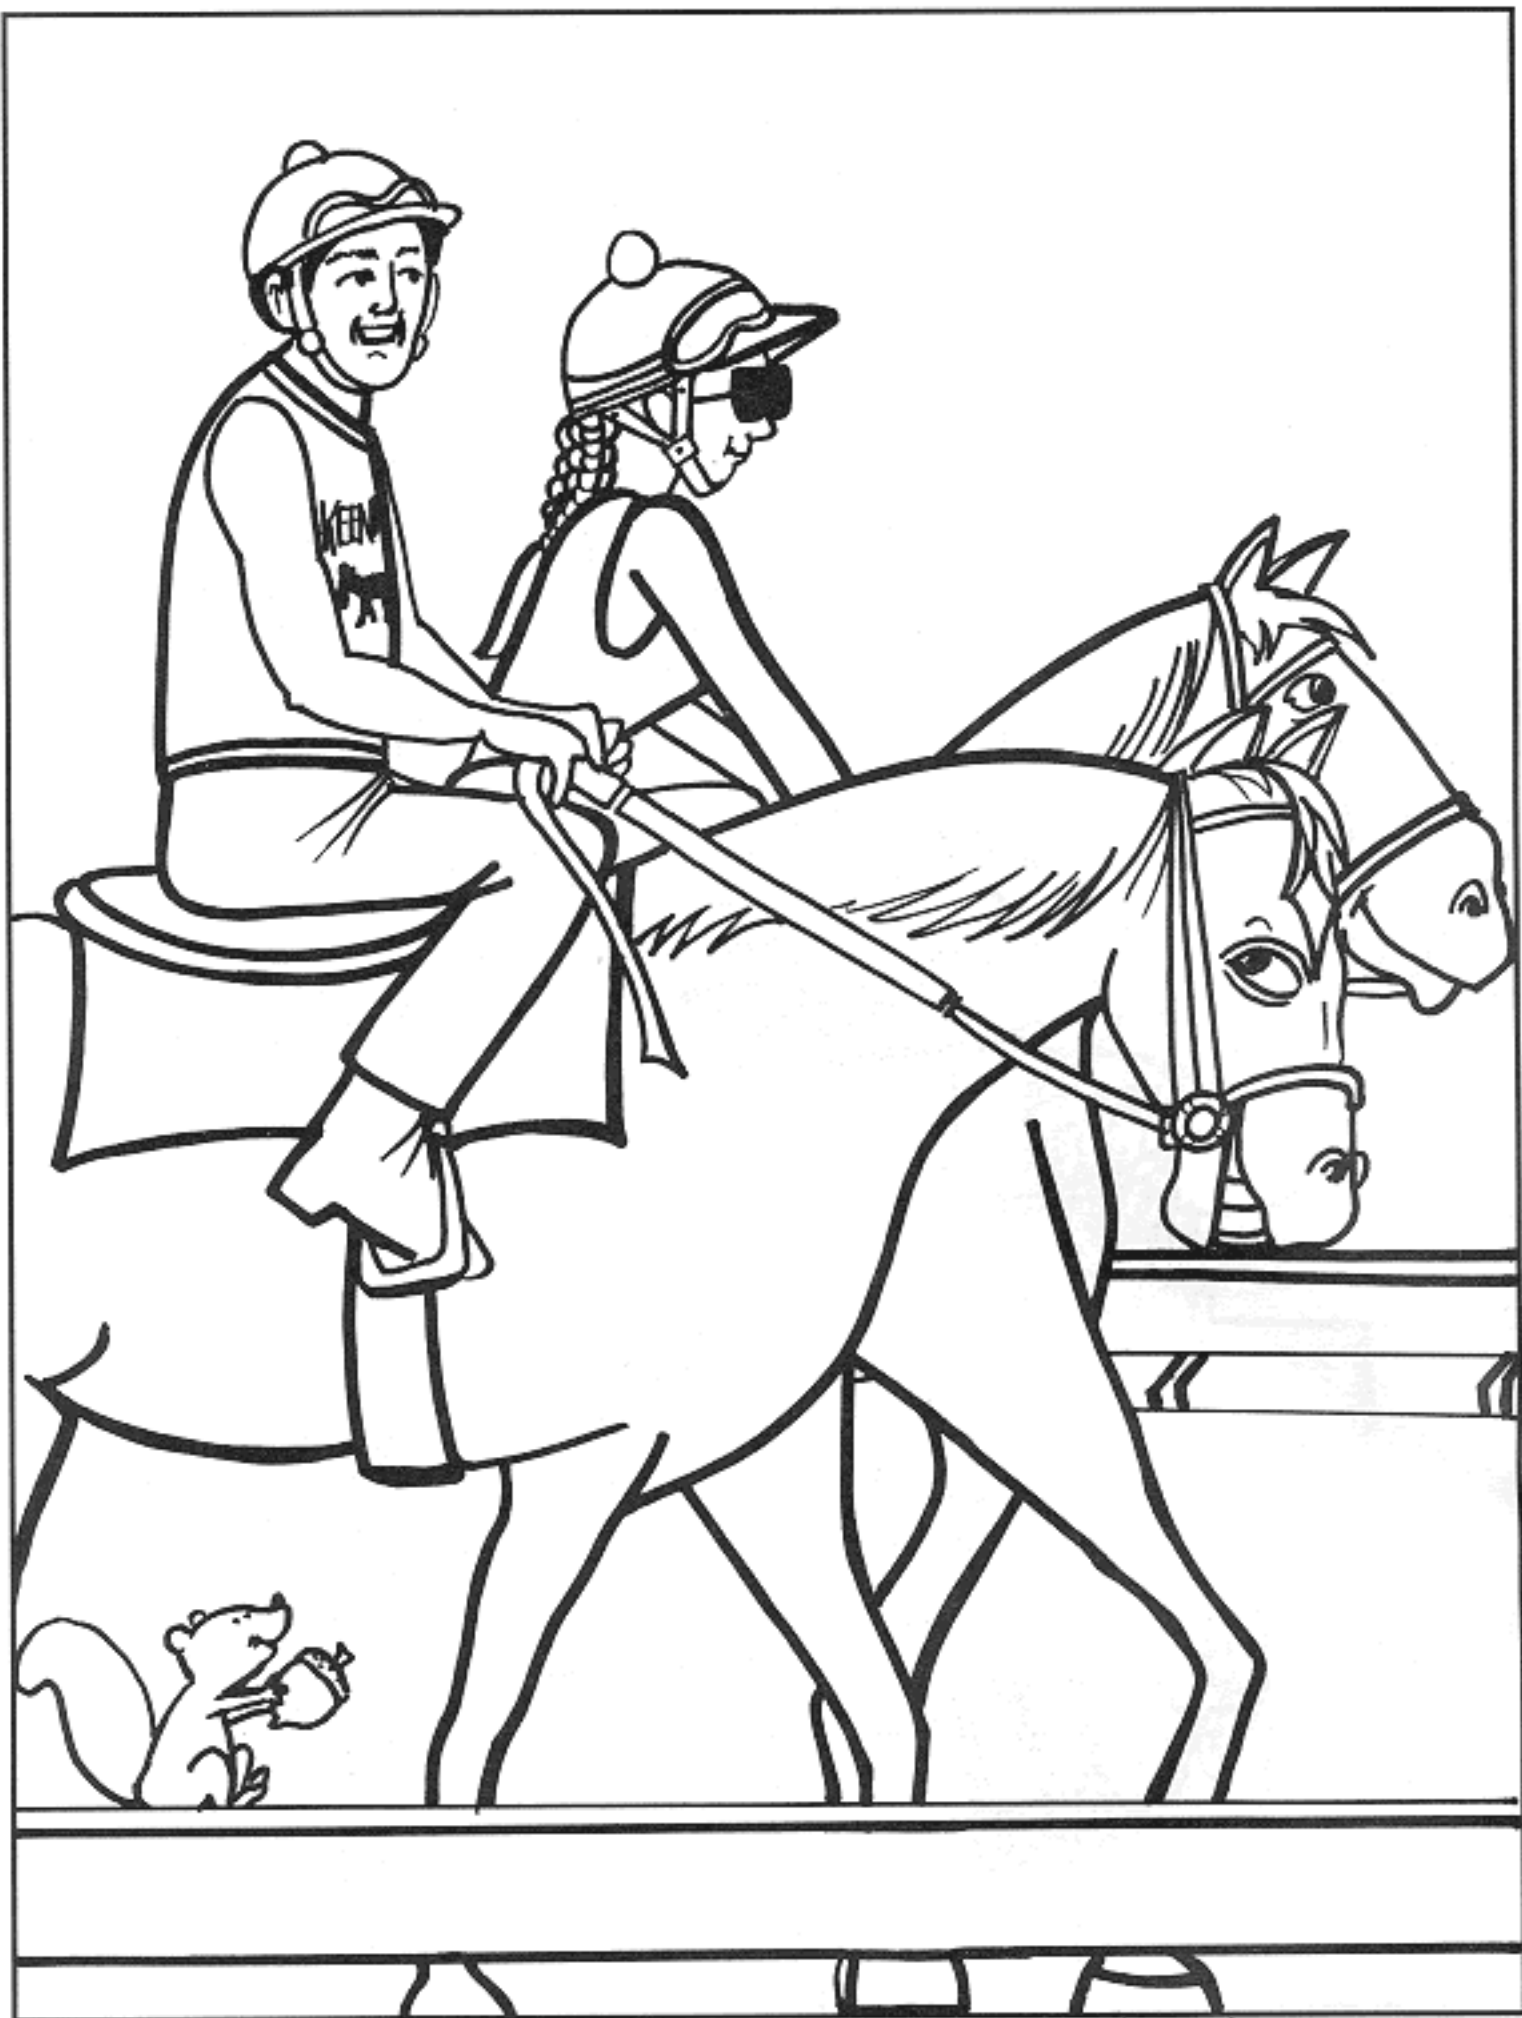

After the horse is sold it is sent back to a farm to learn to race.

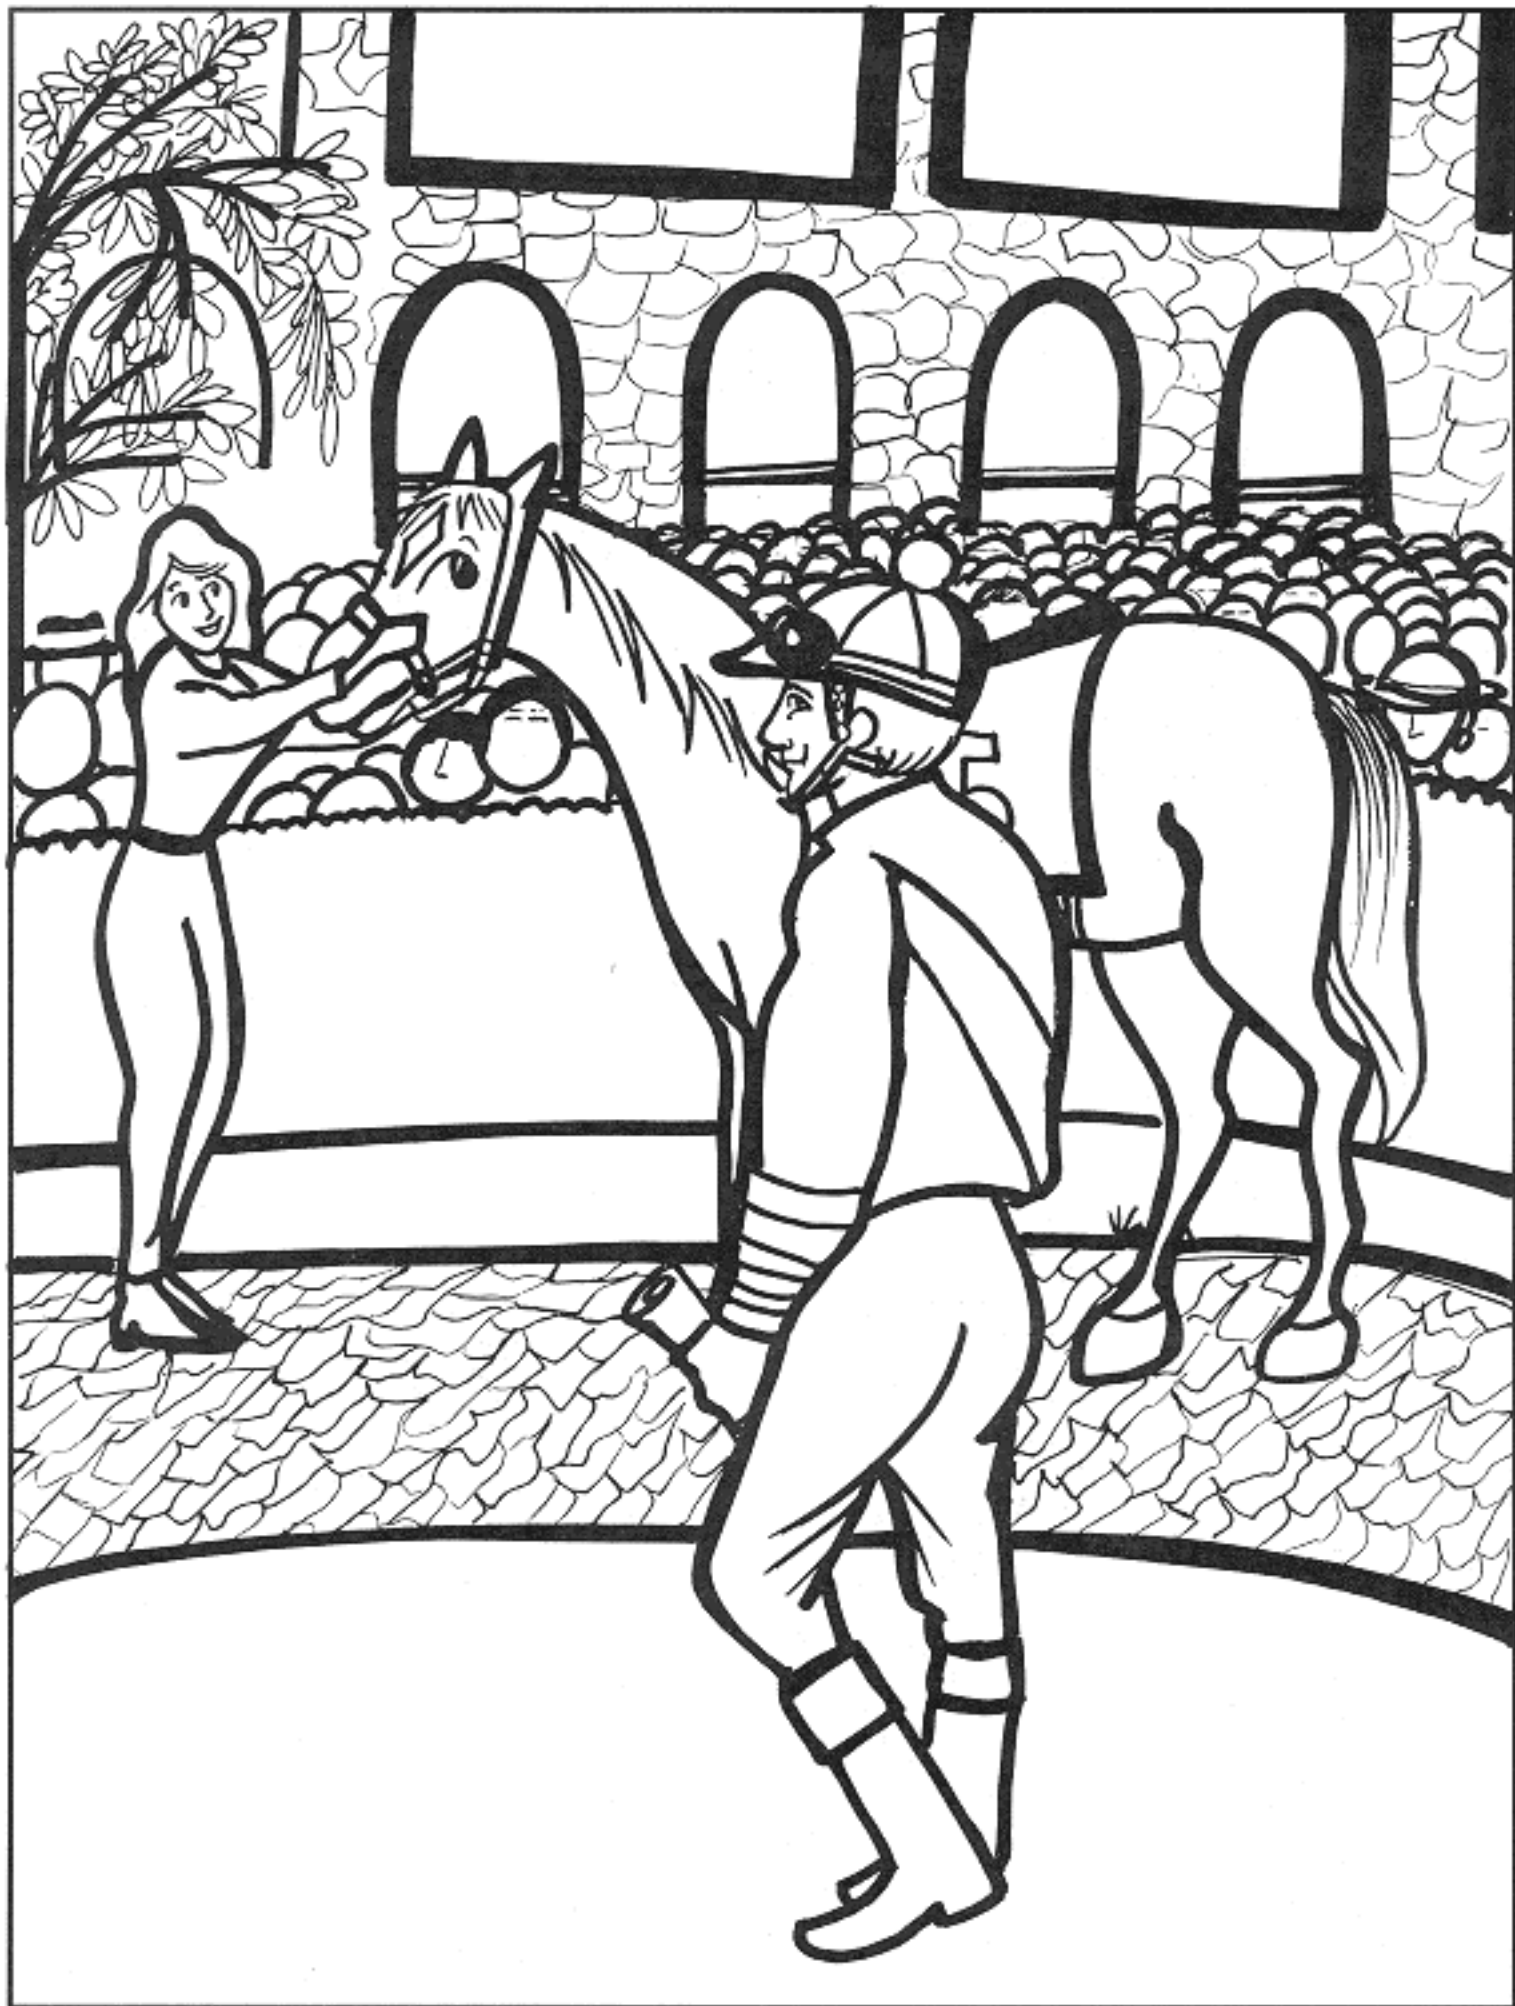

An exercise rider prepares to saddle the horse before a workout.

The horses work out on the track to get ready for racing.

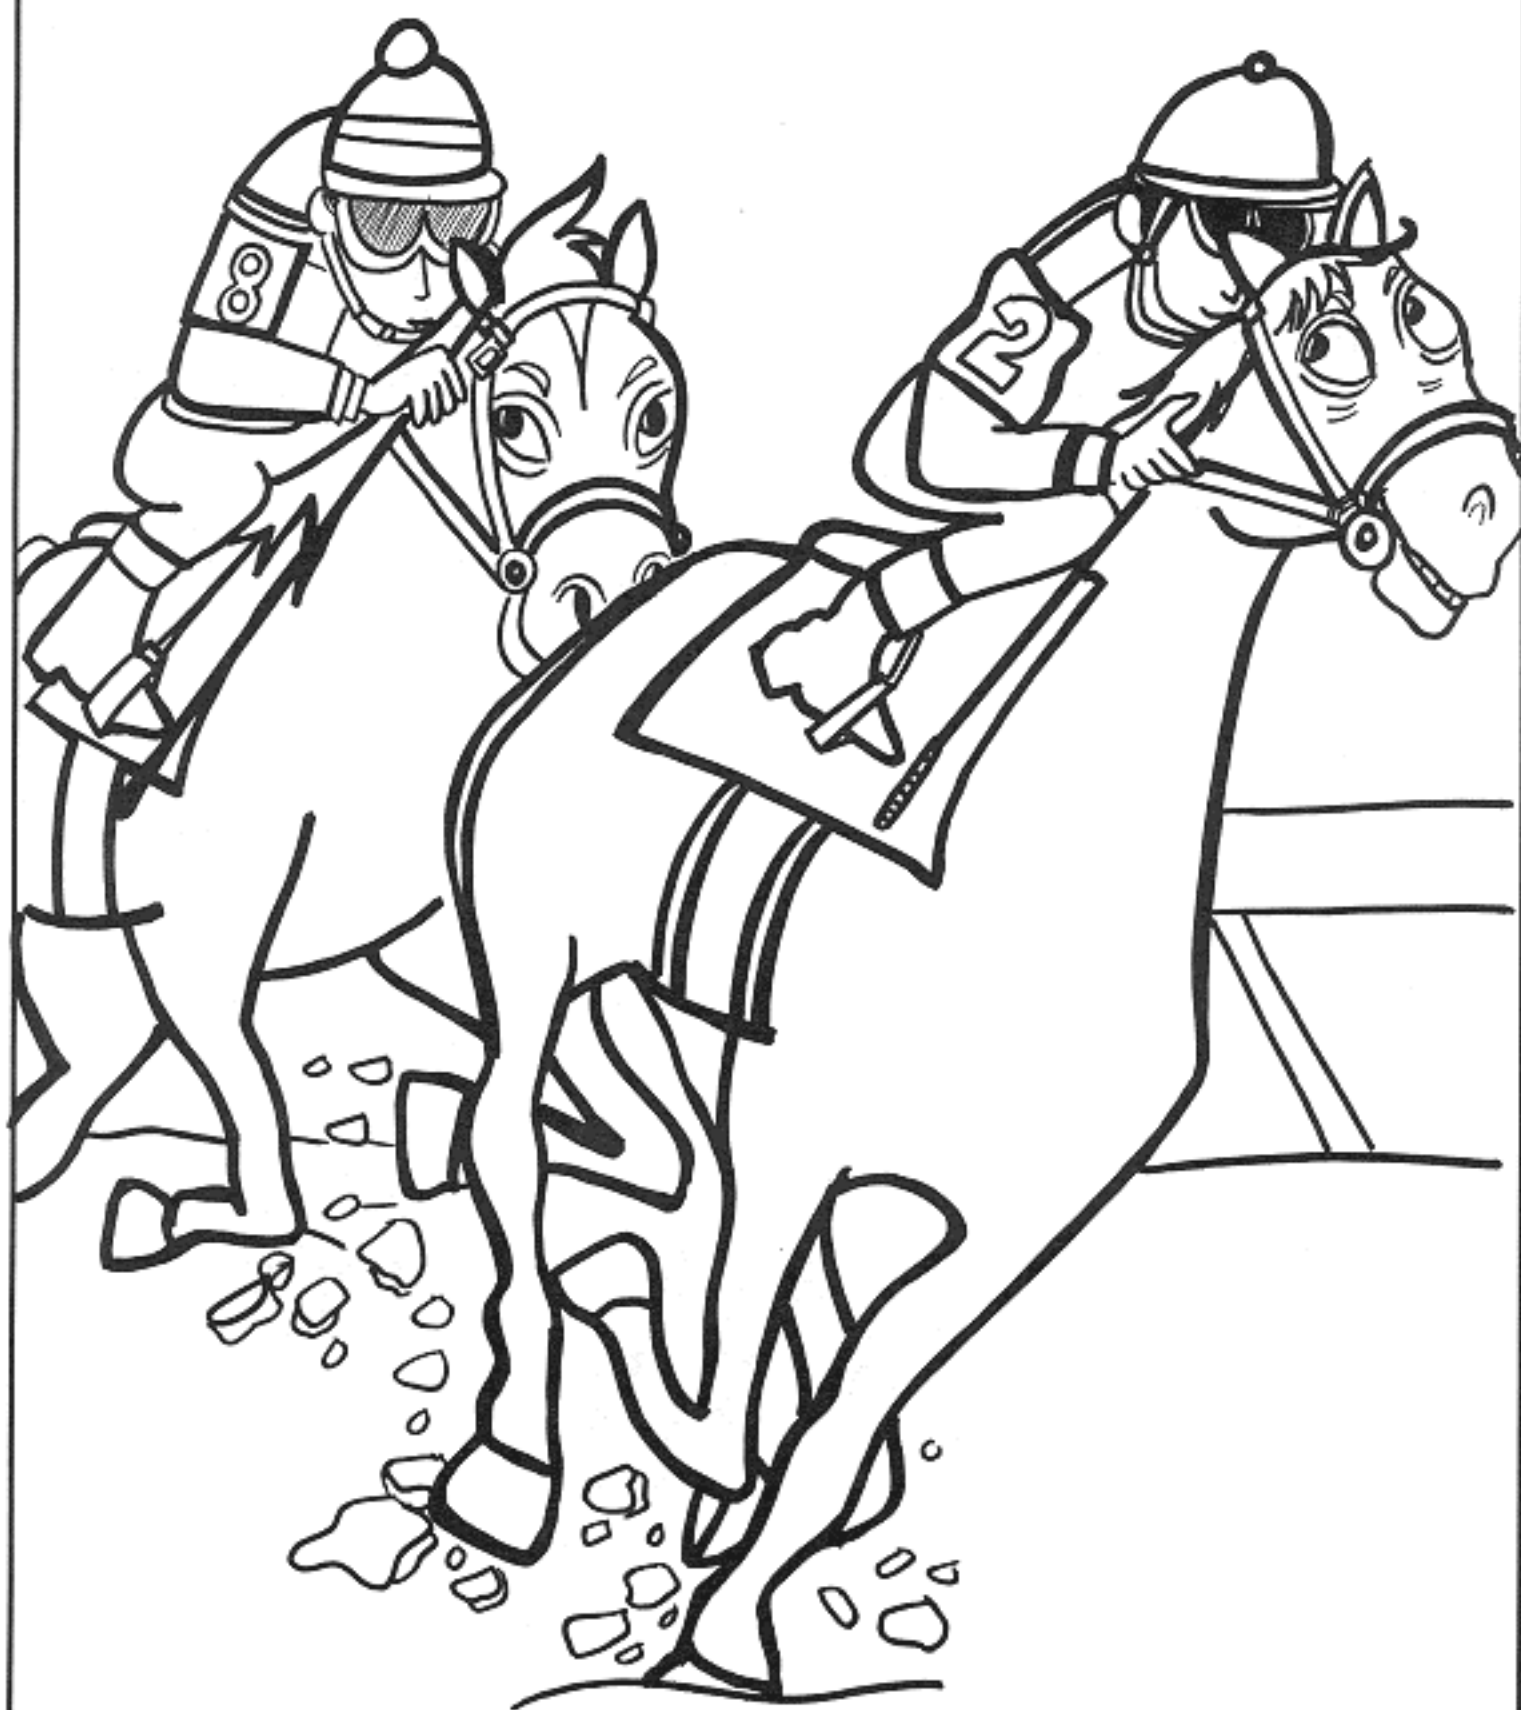

Time for the horse's first race. The horse is waiting for its jockey before the race.

The horses come out of the starting gate and the race begins.

The horses race around the turn with number two in the lead.

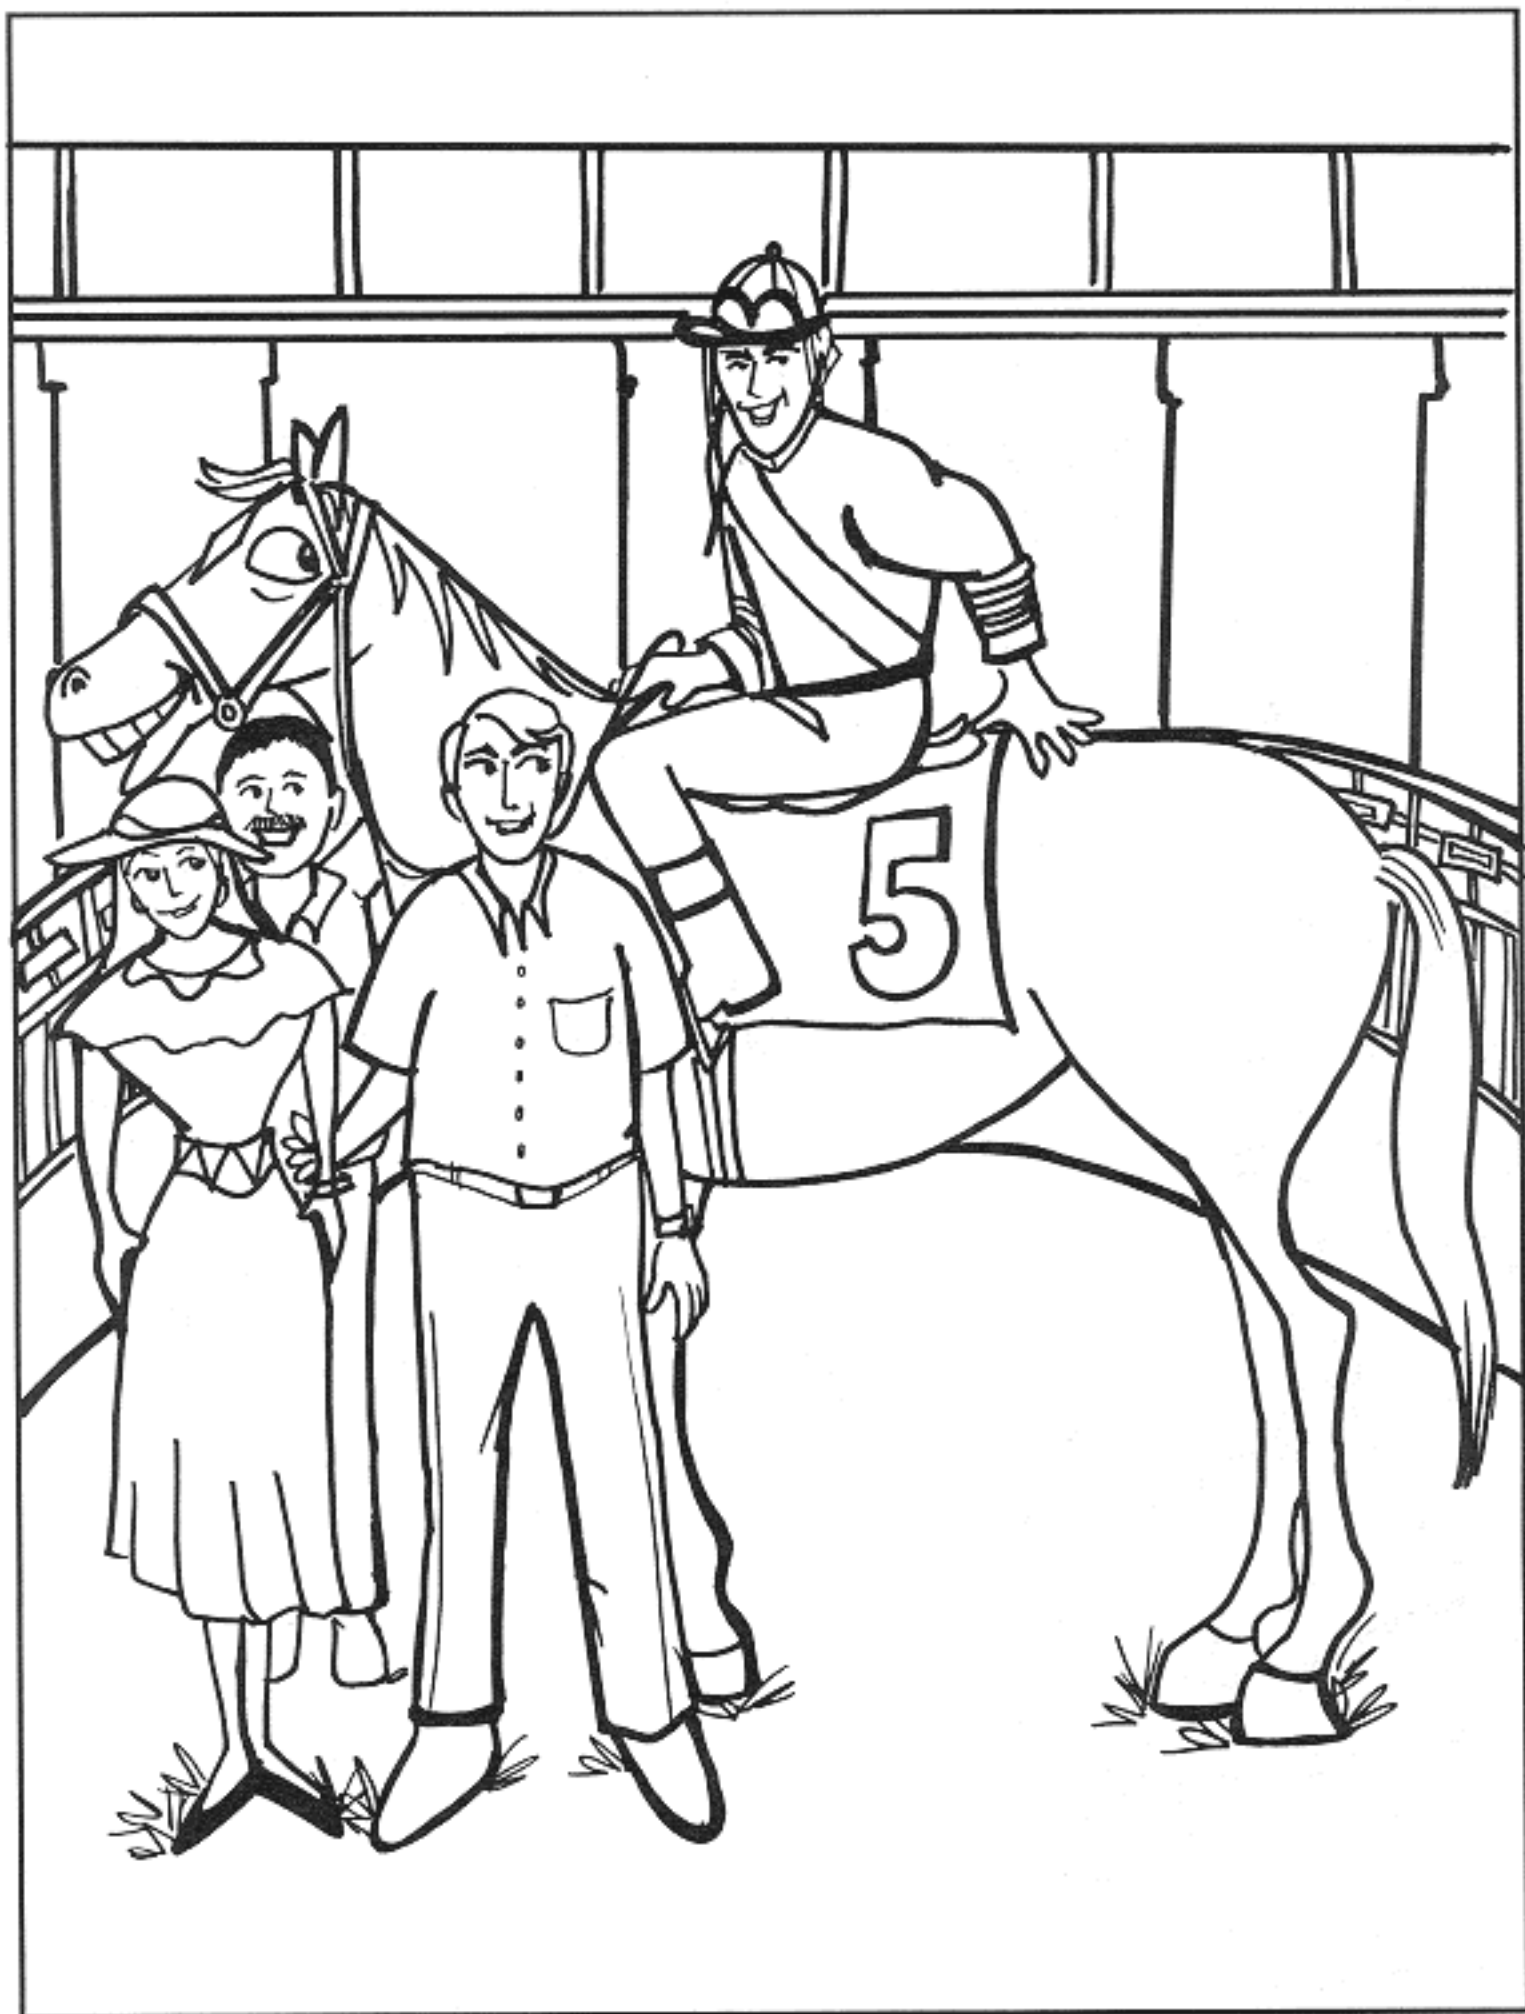

The horses race down the stretch towards the finish line.

Number five is the winner, the first horse to cross the finish line.

After the race the winner, number five, is brought to the winner's circle.
